

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A sensor apparatus for determination of a tire internal pressure for a motor vehicle by at least one measurement sensor in the form of an optical fiber, with an evaluation and computer unit deducing a sought parameter from a change in the light wave. The at least one measurement sensor detects light changes corresponding to the shape and/or size of a tire contact area as an indicator of the internal pressure in the tire.